All she wanted was to move on with her life...

Shamed by the uncovered truth about her missing husband's secret life, Cora Buchanan sets out for home to mend her broken relationship with her parents. Her car breaks down in a small Georgia town, where women are going missing and being murdered. Cora seeks temporary refuge at the Southern Hope Ranch and is embraced by all except for Rex, a rugged widower who wants to protect his daughter from another loss. Cora couldn't have predicted that being stranded would set in motion a series of life-changing events not only for her but for everyone she meets nor could she have known the significance of the song of the meadowlark.

In this romantic suspense, Cora gets way more than she bargained for when she seeks refuge at the Southern Hope. In this Contemporary Christian Romance novel by Georgia native Sherri Wilson Johnson, readers will see what a sweet ranch romance can be like, especially what a Southern romance with a gruff cowboy can be like. And don't forget about the suspense! Please check out this and Mrs. Johnson's other clean romance books.
