Stop Throwing Cash in the Trash is a non-fiction reference book featuring over 380 pages and hundreds of photos. The contents is aimed at helping it's readers to identify unknown, valuable collectibles that are mistakenly being tossed into dumpsters, or sent off to local thrift because they're deemed worthless. This book will help people conduct an estate/garage sale, by increasing their final profit margin. In addition, it will help those people looking to make some extra cash by searching for these unlikely, hidden treasures, then reselling them online for substantial profits.

Did you know a box of 1990's Pampers Paper Diapers can sell for over $700? Or, a pair of 1980's tennis shoes can sell in the thousands. How about a vintage candy box selling for over $200? Yes, believe it! There is a passion to acquire these quirky collectible items.

Being raised by parents who were true treasure hunters- As a child during the 1960s, I prospected for gold in Alaska, dug for semi-precious gemstones in North Carolina, Maine, Montana and Massachusetts (where I was born); metal detecting for Blackbeard's treasure on Ocracoke Island N.C., and during the 1970s, I dug for old bottles and civil war relics in colonial Virginia obsolete dump sites with my father. (Mom wanted no part in this particular type of treasure hunt.) We even found ghost towns in the mountains of Montana, via dirt roads you would never think of taking a car on.

These factors all helped influence my direction in life with continuing the treasure hunting obsession. For many years now, I have hunted for a different type of hidden treasure-- the type of hidden treasure that can be found in any home or estate. It is the world of discovering and reselling valuable trending collectibles. I have been involved with selling desired collectibles on the Wide Wide Web and in antique malls for over 17 years. During this time, I have acquired an abundance of experience evaluating and appraising vintage/antique merchandise. Furthermore, I began studying current, up-to-date buying trends in the second-hand consumer market, which greatly helped me to achieve an eBay "Power Seller" status.

I have spent endless hours of research by reading collectible and antique resource reference books, reading online vintage collecting resources, viewing online educational classes on collectibles, reading vintage magazines, and through attending hundreds of estate/garage sales, auctions, and flea markets.
